THE DRAMA-MUSIC.

RE-ENTRANCE OF MR. AND MRS. KENDAL Mr. and Mrs. Kendal reappeared last night at Abbey's Theatre. They are to remain for two weeks, and it is announced that they will not again be seen in New-York. They were heartily welmed, as they always have been on each of their numerous visits here. The play of last night was ilse," one of the most interesting and pleas of their repertory. Mr. Kendal appears in this better advantage than in almost any other play to better advantage than in almost any other play in which he has been seen here, and Mrs. Kendal also has a well-adapted and interesting part. The play was listened to throughout by the audience pith obvious gratification. "Impulse" will be repited this evening and on Saturday afternoon. A White Lie" will be given to-morrow and Thursday evenings, and "The Queen's Shilling" on Friday and Saturday evenings. Both these two are agreeable plays, and show these accomplished actors to much advantage.

MR. MAYO AND "PUDD'NHEAD WILSON." Mr. Frank Mayo appeared last night at the Herid Square Theatre before a small audience in isquare trial production of his dramatization of Mark trial production of his dramatization of Mark trial production of Mark trial production of his dramatization of seemed to be made up largely of the friends of the actor, an observation which applies, in point of ime, only to the prologue and a portion of the first act. After that everybody in the house had become the intimate of Pudd'nhead, and the demonstrations of approval, at first merely friendly, became enthustastic. Mr. Mayo's dramatization has preserved the flavor of the author's humor, and a real charactor walks the stage in the person of the clientless country lawyer, with his shrewd philosophy and his contempt for the village blockheads who have made ontempt for the vinage blockneads who have made im the butt of their bucolic wit. The play is sufficiently melodramatic to give Mr. Mayo opportunity to employ the methods with ch his long experience has made him familiar. If anything, it suffers from a l'ttle too much plot, ving a little too much "talky" explication; yet this defect is easily susceptible of correction yet this defect is easily susceptible of correction. The action hinges upon an identification by means of the thumbmarks of two persons, the scientific study of which has been Pudd'nhead's hobby. This identification brings his enemies to confusion and the piay fo a triumphant close. One of the most effective situations is that at the close of the third act, when the investigator believes his cherished theory exploded, its effectiveness being gained by its extreme simplicity. Wilson's forensic oratory in the last act, also, is excellently conceived, having neither too much nor too little of the spirit of the backwood advocate. Mr. Mayo was supported by a competent company, Miss Mary Shaw, as Roxy, the white slave-mother, acted with force and generally with good judgment. Mr. Henley was weighed down with the part of a very bad villain. Most of the actors were remarkably consistent in the use of their Southern accents. The play is in refreshing contrast to so much that has been produced upon the New-York stage this season weighed down with the part of a very bad villain Most of the actors were remarkably consistent in the use of their Southern accents. The play is in refreshing contrast to so much that has been produced upon the New-York stage this season in that it is absolutely decent.

Mr. Mayo was obliged to respond to repeated cur. produced upon the New-York stage this season in that it is absolutely decent.

Mr. Mayo was obliged to respond to repeated curtain calls during the progress of the play, and at its close was obliged to speak his acknowledgments. He read the following dispatch from Mark Twain: "Cable me the jury's verdict," The audience cried in answer: "A success."

"TRILBY" AT THE GARDEN

stage version of George Du Maurier's novel, Garden Theatre last night. It is like most plays that are drawn from novels in one respect at least—that is, it is not nearly so good as a play as the book is as a novel. Those who went to the theatre, as probably nine-tenths of the audience did, having read the story and hoping to see and to hear the realization of it before them, had reason to be both pleased and disappointed. The stage presented a series of pictures transferred to it from the book with skill and at times with surprising ac-Whatever they did and whatever curacy. Whatever they did and whatever they said, the characters looked wonderfully like Mr. Du Maurier's sketches, and they often formed themselves into groups with the obvious intention of recalling the drawings that are printed in the book. The play itself had some dramatic moments, notably at the end of the third act. Here at least half a dozen separate scenes of the book were crowded together into one, and half of the whole story was told in ten minutes. Some tendency was noticeable to introduce incidents and suggestions from the book at the expense of the effectiveness of the play a tendency usually seen in dramatized novels.

Miss Virginia Harned was a beautiful image of Triby, but it cannot be said that she reproduced the spirit of Mr. Du Maurier's heroine. She lacked simplicity, freedom and earnestness. She was the sort of person that Triby might have been if she had been educated in a young ladies' boardins school. It is true, however, that the adapter of the play dealt her a harder blow than ever did Svengall with his baton. This was at the end of the second act, when, after the interference of Mrs. Bud with his baton, the second act, when, after the interference of Mrs. Bagot, Triby went away, not, as in the book, in fulfilment of her promise to Little Billee's mother, but under the mesmeric influence of Svengall. This completely robs her character of that fine element of steadfastness which is its ruling trait as Mr. Du Maurier has drawn it. There might be a question as to whether in this situation Triby would show the better lovality to her lover by leaving him of by staying with him, but it is obvious that the novelist intended her going to express a most unselfish wish to do what was best for him, while in the play a single wave of Svengall's hypnotic hands purs all lovality or disloyality out of the question. The play does, however, show Tribby at this point making a promise to Mrs. Basot one minute and breaking it the next without hesitation. Whatever is repulsive in the nature and appearance said, the characters looked wonderfully like Mr. Du Maurier's sketches, and they often formed them-

LOCAL THEATRES LAST NIGHT. There is much activity in the local theatres. .

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal appeared at Abbey's Theatre last night, in Mr. Stephenson's well-known play of "Impulse"—one of the most successful pleces they have ever presented. . . Mr. Herrmann, the magician, came forth at the Academy of Music.—a place which bears an absolutely inappropriate name, eand gave a most entertaining exhibition of his extraordinary skill. That performer is not the Herrextraordinary skill. That performer is not the Herrmann who disported at the Academy, and elsewhere, about thirty-five years ago, but a relative of that expert person. Mr. Sandow and the Trocadero company gave an exhibition at the American Theatre, and pleased many spectators. Mr. C. H. Hopper and Miss Annie Ward (Mrs. Tiffany) performed at the Columbus Theatre, in an Irish drama, entitled "The Vale of Avoca." Mr. Paimer, at the Garden Theatre, presented a play upon the subject of Mr. Du Maurier's story of "Trifby," wherein much prominence was given to the villanous Bvengail, and Mr. Wilton Lackaye made himself conspicuous. That carnest and foreible actor, Mr. Frank Mayo, made his re-entrance at the Herald Square Theatre, in a drama that he has constructed, on the basis of Mark Tvain's novel of "Pudd'n Head Wilson." Mr. E. H. Sothern began an engagement at the Harlem Opera House, where he may be seen during the week, in a round of those dramas with which his name is associated. The burlesque of "Little Christopher" was transferred from the Garden Theatre to Paimer's Theatre. Miss Rehan and her associates, at Daly's Theatre, gave an afternoon as well as an evening performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Mr. Jefferson,—who will deliver an address, to-day, at the Berkeley Lyceum,—appeared at the Amphion Theatre, in Brooklyn, as Rip Van Winkle. Mr. Crane signalized the fiftith performance of "His Wife's Father, at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, by a distribution of souvenirs to Avenue Theatre, by a distribution of souvenirs to he audience. In other theatres the entertainments lately current remain unchanged. Mr. Mr. Mansfield has not yet assigned any date for the opening of the Garrick Theatre. mann who disported at the Academy, and else

FALSTAFF AT THE OPERA.

It would seem almost as if the New-York public's appetite for the musical drama had been satisfied by the abundant provision made for it during the winter; so, at least, it seemed last evening at the first night of Messrs. Abbey and Grau's brief post-Lenten season at the Metropolitan Opera House. The audience was far from being so numerous or so brilliant as most of those that have assembled there in the regular season. It was nevertheless moved to considerable enthusiasm at many noments during the evening; and indeed it had expendent of the popera chosen for the opera chosen for the opening night of the supplementary season was Verd's brilliant comedy. "Falstaff," the first Verd's brilliant comedy, "Falstaff," the first American production of which was one of the chief musical distinctions of the past winter; and the cast was in all essential points the same as that which first brought the work before the New York public last February. The performance was extremely spirited, and the contagious gayety of the piece found its way at once across the foot. the piece found its way at once across the foot-

Mr. Maurel entered into his impersonation of the greasy knight with immense gusto and exuberant greasy knight with immense gusto and exuberant spirit, and though at times his voice failed to meet all the exacting demands made upon it by the part, his performance as a whole was a memorable one. Mmc. Eames was laboring under the discomfort of an injury to her hand, compelling her to carry her arm in a sling; but it did not mar the effectiveness of her action or her singing.

Repeated hearings deepen the impression made by the first production of the work as to its originality and spontaneity, the richness and plasticity of its musical ideas, the fruitfulness of resource, with which they have been fashioned to serve the purposes of comic expression, and the finesse and aptitude of the instrumentation. It is unfortunate that the management did not see its way to the production of "Faistaff" earlier in the winter; for it is a work that requires repeated hearings fully to disclose its qualities and all its beauties.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY.

Miss Helen Dawson Gallatin gave a luncheon yes terday afternoon, at her home, No. 58 West Fifty-eighth-st., to a number of her young friends, the guest of honor being her sister, Mrs. J. de Courcy Ireland. ## PAAS FESTIVAL OF ST. NICHOLAS.

SIXTIETH CELEBRATION OF THE OCCASION BY THE SOCIETY.

Paas festival is Dutch for peace, or Easter, festival. The St. Nicholas Society being Dutch in derivation and tradition, holds a pass festival every Monday after Easter. The sixtieth celebranight. At 9:30 they gathered in the big ballroom and sat down at a score of round tables. Beer and long clay pipes were features, but the majority of the members developed an include the majority of the members developed and the majority of the me jority of the members developed an inclination to go back on their ancestors, and take to champagne and cigars. Sandwiches and salads were the main articles of diet. At the centre table sat Chauncey M. Depew, president of the society; the Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Weter, William H. McElroy, Frederic J. de Peyster, George G. Dewitt, secretary of the society; Charles A. Schermerhorn, treasurer, and Henry C. Swords, Edward do Peyster Avingston, Abraham Van Santvoord, William Carpenter and E. Bernard Oakley, stewards. At the other table the members were grouped in families. There were from two to half a dozen representa-tives of a number of Knickerbocker families.

Mr. Depew, who had previously given a dinner to the officers and stewards of the society in a private dining-room, called the assemblage to order. He said that for gixty years the society had celebrated the paas festival in one way, with much speechmaking and drinking of toasts. This year there was a departure. This was an era of fads. There was the silver fad, the new-woman fad, the cremation fad, the novel which was not a novel fad, the Trilby fad and now the stewards had hit on a new pass festival fad. The Dutch were the most conservative of men and women. If the Dutchwoman whose only fad was cleanliness in housekeeping, morality, aspirations and love for husband and family, had been introduced to the new-woman fad, it would have been an uphappy day for the new woman. Taking up the cremation fad, Mr. Depew said that the ancients kept the ashes of their dead in beautiful urns. His business connection with some of the safe deposit companies in this city enabled beautiful urns. His business connection with some of the safe deposit companies in this city enabled him to know that the New-York followers of this fad used the safe deposit box for this purpose. When Maculay's New-Zealander explored the ruins of this town he would write that the New-York tribe followed the custom common in so many American tribes of surrounding the remains of their dead with all that they held most dear in life, to wit, their stocks and bonds.

Going back to the Dutch, Mr. Depew said they were all farmers originally. Some of them settled on Long Island, and planted cabbages. Others settled on Manhattan Island, and planted cabbages are planting cabbages to-day. The descendants of the Long Island Dutchmen were planting cabbages to-day. The descendants of the Manhattan cabbage-planters were the aristocracy of the richest city in the country. This proved that in America aristocracy was not always a question of noble deeds or great culture, but of having ancestors who pre-empted future corner-lots for their cabbage fields.

Mr. McElroy made a characteristically witty speech, and Mr. De Peyster followed him. The rest of the evening was taken up with an elaborate programme of music and recitation by professional entertainers.

MR. STODDARD'S LECTURE ON NORWAY. At Daly's Theatre yesterday morning John L. Stoddard began the last week of his course of matinee illustrated lectures. His subject was "Norway, the Land of the Midnight Sun." The lecture is not new here, having been given in at least two of the previous annual courses, but in some respects it is one of the most pleasing of Mr. Stoddard's repertory. The country is one which is compara-tively little known to an average audience, except tively little known to an average audience, except through description and illustration. The country is also singularly picturesque, and, as its beauties are almost all those of natural scenery, it has an especially fresh and invigorating effect, even when it is viewed only on a screen.

The fine combinations of coast and mountain scenery give opportunities for many of the best pictures in Mr. Stoddard's numerous galleries. The lecture was enjoyed yesterday no less than it has always been heretofore. It will be repeated, as usual, on each day of the week, at 3 p. m. to-day and on Friday, and at 11 a. m. on other days. Announcement has already been made of the course of evening lectures which Mr. Stoddard is to give at Daly's next week and the week following.

MRS, ISAAC THOMPSON'S DEATH.

The body of Mrs. Isaac Thompson, the wife of Isaac Thompson, the well-known bookmaker, who died at the Oriental Hotel in this city on Friday night, will be placed in the receiving yault in Cal-vary Cemetery to await the arrival of Mr. Thomp-son and his daughter, who will sail from England next Saturday. Matthew Corbett, who has charge of Mr. Thompson's affairs in the latter's absence, had considerable difficulty in learning where Mr. Thompson was, but finally reached him by cable. Mr. Corbett will also attend to the funeral arrange-ments of Mrs. Thompson.

Louis Parker, of Meriden, Conn., was his brother's best man. The ushers were Harry W. Hawley, Charles Smith, of Bridgeport, Conn.; Robert Hibbard, of this city, and John Tredennick, of Meriden, Conn. ### BROWN ALUMNI DINNER TO-NIGHT. TO BE HELD AT DELMONICO'S, BEGINNING AT 6:30

The annual dinner of the Brown Alumni of New-York will take place at Delmonico's this evening at 6:30 o'clock. Numerous responses have been re ceived to the invitations, and the officers of the alumni anticipate that to-night's gathering will be equal in numbers and influence to the standard of previous years. Francis Lawton, president of the Brown Alumni, will preside at the dinner, and among those who have intimated their willingness to speak are the Rev. Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, president of the Brown University; the Rev. James O. Murray, Dean of Princeton College, whose theme will be "The Old Schools and the New"; the Rev. Dr. Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard; Pro-fessor Seth, of the faculty of Brown, who will talk about "The Scotch Universities"; Charles Warren Lippitt, Governor-elect of Rhode Island; Henry Kirke Porter, of Phitsburg, and Charles L. Colby.

OPENING THE COACHING SEASON.

THE PIONEER DRIVERS TO THE COUNTRY CLUB-THOSE ON BOARD.

The public coach Pioneer, shining in a new paint, left the Hotel Brunswick yesterday morning at II o'clock, on the first of its regular trips to the Country Club, at Westchester. Colonel De Lancey Kane held the reins over the chestnut leaders and wheelers when the coach started. Furs and heavy wraps were made necessary by the threating state of the weather, and the ladies of the party appeared in their walking suits, instead of their coaching costumes. While the day broke clear and bright, threatening skies frowned upon the party at the start, but, regardless of chances for a downpoor of rain, cold winds and muddy roads, the Pioneer, with its merry load, whirled up Fifth-ave., through the Park and over the roads, by sturdy relays of horses, and reached its destination five minutes ahead of schedule time The coach which had been engaged for the trip by tive appearance with its red undercarriage, red, white and black body, and an interested crowd watched the preparations for the departure.

On the box seat beside Colonel Kane was Mrs. Frederic Bronson, in a plain green cloth tailor-made gown and a small bonnet of green velvet and black jet. On the seat behind Colonel Kane and Mrs. Bronsen were Mrs. De Lancey Kane, in a dressed with plumes; J. Creighton Webb and Center Hitchcock. Mr. Sionne and Herbert D. Robbins were alone on the rear sent. When Howlett, the guard, in a brand new cont of green cloth trimmed with gold braid, and a silver-gray high hat, blew his horn at 11 o'clock and the herses received their heads the crowd in front of the Brunswick said "Ah!" There was no cheering, because coaching is no longer a novelty in New-York, and it is 1 and to arouse enthusiasm over the departure or arrival of a coach. The first stop was made yesterday at St. Nicholas-save, and One-hundred-and-thirty-sixth-st., where fresh horses were taken on. The second change was made at Washington Bridge, and the third relay was furnished at Williamsbridge. At the Country Club a dainty luncheon was served to Mr. and Mrs. Sloane and their greests in the dining-room. The return trip was made without incident, the coach arriving at the Brunswick at precisely 6 o'clock. dressed with plames; J. Creighton Webb and Center

EASTER IN 1895.

MORE GENERALLY OFSERVED.

From The Boston Advertiser. From The Boston Advertiser.

Even outside of the churches, irdeed, the observation of Easter has grown. A glance along the Boston streets on Saturday, for example, would have shown that much. The pure white flower and stately stalk of the Easter Illy were to be seen everywhere. In little groups the street hawkers offered them for sale; many stores in the retail drygoods district sold hundreds of these files, while the florists not only did a thriving trade in cut and potted Illies, but sold wagonloads of violets, roces and azaleas, because of the general custom of flower-giving at the close of the passion-week.

AN ERA OF PROSPERITY. From The Chicago Tribune.

From The Chicago Tribune.

Easter Sunday will be gladly welcomed with all its fair promises and prophecies. It dawns upon a new era for Chicago—a time of enhanced prosperity, of more honest and economical government, of reform in the civil se,vice, of war upon boodlers, of the downfall of the ring, and of the removal of the incubus of Hopkinsism which has lain with such crushing weight upon the city for fifteen months past. MRS. STEVENS'S WILL FILED

VALUE OF THE ESTATE ESTIMATED AT

MRS, PAGET THE ONLY HEIR-AT-LAW-DISPOSI-TION OF THE PROFFRTY-WHY MRS. MELCH-ER RECEIVED NO BEQUEST.

The will of Mrs. Paran Stevens, who died on April 3 at her home, Fifty-seventh-st, and Fifth-ave., was filed for probate yesterday afternoon in the office of the Surrogate. The will was filed by Hoffman Miller, of the firm of Miller, Peckham & Dixon. It was executed on May 15, 1894, in the presence of ex-Surrogate Delano C. Calvin and Noel Gale. The Union Trust Company is appointed executor and trustee. According to the petition of lames H. Ogilvie, the vice-president of that company, the real estate of Mrs. Stevens is estimated to be worth about $500,000, and the estimated value of the personal property is placed at about $1,000,daughter of Mrs. Stevens, who arrived here from London on Saturday last. Mrs. Paget's affidavit was filed with the will, in which she waives the issuance of citations for the probate of the paper, admits that the instrument is the last will of her mother, and that she is the surviving child and only heir-at-law; that the will was executed with all the formalities required by law, and that it is entitled to probate. She also desires to join in the petition of the Union Trust Company that it may be admitted to probate. The testimony of the subscribing witnesses to the will will be taken before the Probate Clerk on Wednesday.

The will is dated May 15, 1894. It gives to the sister, Fannie Reed, $5,000 a year for life, and to sister, Fannie Reed, $5,000 a year for life, and to the son-in-law a like amount yearly. Her nephew, Harry Reed, gets $10,000, and her niece, Florence
Reed, $10,000, absolutely. To her daughter, Mary Flake Paget, is left all the decedent's jewelry in trust, to be turned over to the granddaughter,
Louisa Wemyss Paget, on the death of her mother,
If the granddaughter dies, then the jewelry goes into the residuary estate.

All the remainder of the estate of Mrs. Stevens not necessary to the payment of the legacies to her nephew and niece and the payment of her debts is given to the executor in trust; and after paying the sums to her sister and son-in-law, as mentioned, the balance of the income is to be paid to her daushier. Mary Fiske Paget, during her life, but without any power on her part to anticipate the income, or to encumber or in any manner dispose of it, until it shall be personally received by her, her personal receipt to be a sufficient voucher for it.

her, her personal receipt to be a summer to for it.

There are no public bequests.

While Mrs. Stevens disposed of her property, the main heir-at-law is her daughter, Mrs. Paget. There is another daughter of Paran Stevens, by his first wife. She is the wife of John L. Melcher, of No. 30 West Twenty-first-st. Nothing was bequeathed to her by Mrs. Stevens, for the reason that when Paran Stevens died at the same time that he provided for his wife he also made provision for his daughter by his first wife. Mr. Melcher said last night that his wife did not expect any bequest from Mrs. Stevens, as she received her portion of the estate at the time that Mr. Stevens made his will. Her property, so bequeathed, is held in trust by trustees, as was Mrs. Paran Stevens's property.

THE BRIDEGROOM DID NOT APPEAR.

ALL PREPARATIONS MADE FOR THE WEDDING. BUT THE BRIDE WAITED IN VAIN.

John A. Scott, of Cross-st., Harrison, N. J., and Miss Mary A. Donnelly, of Davis-ave., Kearny, in the same State, were to be married at St. Cecella's Catholic Church, in Kearny, yesterday morning. A nuptial mass was arranged for, and a large number of people had gathered at the church in re-sponse to invitations. The time for the ceremony passed, but the bridal party did not arrive. At the home of the girl's parents it was said that Mr. Scott had falled to appear. Everything there had been in readiness, even to a wedding breakfast.

No cause was known for Scott's action, Mrs. Don nelly saying that her daughter and prospective sonnealy saying that her daughter and prospective some in-law had parted apparently on the best terms of friendship last Saturday night. The wedding was announced from the altar on Sunday, and the coach which was to take the bridal party to the church waited in front of the bride-elect's house for nearly three hours for Scott to appear. At the latter's home the recreant bridegroom could not be seen, and his father and brother refused to talk.

FLAMES BURST FORTH SUDDENLY.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE IN A SIX-STORY BUILDING AT MARION AND SPRING STS.

The eastern border of the drygoods district had its turn in the prevailing epidemic of dangerous fires last night. At 9:30 o'clock two alarms were rung for a serious fire in a six-story business building at Spring and Marion sts., the upper part of which, a mass of flames. Altogether, the damage will and the stocks of the two firms occupying it—Frank & Stern, discillery agents, and H. Mandel, manufacturer of braids and button moulds. An Italian tenement-house next door to the burning building was in great danger, but the tenants were hustled out by a policeman, much to their disgust. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

GRADUATES IN DENTISTRY.

EIGHTY MEN RECEIVE DIPLOMAS AT CHICKERING HALL

The twenty-ninth annual commencement of the New-York College of Dentistry was held last night at Chickering Hall. The doors were thrown open as early as 7 o'clock, and at 8, the hour set for the exercises, the hall was filled beyond the seating capacity. Many of the visitors brought baskets of flowers, which were arranged around the footlights until they formed a veritable bower on the stage. The graduating class numbers eighty. At 8 o'clock the Rev. William W. Moir began the exercises with a prayer. The 7th Regiment orchestra then played Mascagni's "Intermezzo," at the close of which Professor Frank Abbott, dean of the faculty, conferred the degrees upon the mem the faculty, conferred the degrees upon the members of the class. Professor F. Le Roy Satterlee awarded the prizes as follows: Gold medal, Walter Davis Smith; silver medal, Arthur Hastings Merritt; second silver medal, José Vidal y Vlaret; third silver medal, Walter Scott Waldburg; fourth silver medal, Francis Leonard Green. Dr. J. Levin Chaim, of the graduating class, made the valedictory address, and then the Rev. Dr. George R. Van de Water addressed the graduates, A benediction was pronounced by the Rev.
